

Rod Handle Material

Hypalon

The Highest Quality Hypalon Available!

Hypalon is a tough, soft, open cell foam that has been used on high quality fishing rods for almost 20 years now and should be used on your best rods. It is used extensively on the west coast. Use the two sizes of inside diameters below to fit to your blank. This material stretches to fit most blank diameters with a lubricant such as acetone, alcohol or using epoxy materials.

Cork Tape and Shrink Tubing

This Cork Tape has adhesive backing and is used for handle material where foam grips are not practical. It also serves as a lightweight alternative and no reel seat is required with this type of handle. Shrink Tubing can be used over cork tape at the reel attachment area and at the top of the handle. Shrink tubing, when exposed to heat, such as a heat gun or torch, shrinks to ½ its original size. This makes for a nice long lasting finish. Comes in Black.

Typical fishing rod requires 8 to 10 feet of tape for one layer. Some rods require double or triple layers of cork tape.

3M Black Rubber Grip Tape

We believe that Badfish is the only source of this new handle material to the sportfishing industry. The material is adhesive backed and is applied over a layer of cork tape. It has a non-abrasive wrinkle finish, is extremely tough and will last longer than cork tape, provide great grip characteristics and look great on your rods.

You will typically need 8 feet of this tape for each fishing rod handle. Typically applied over 1-2 layers of cork tape.

Rod Finish, Coatings and Supplies

Badfish supplies all the popular epoxy coatings by Flex Coat, Classic and U-40. You can use standard thickness epoxy for most applications. However, using light thickness epoxy for the first coat increases soaking into the threads and will eventually reduce the amount of bubbles in your finish.
